Enormous Challenges and Threats
Derives Necessity for Regional Cooperation

- Today, all countries in the Maghreb and Sahel-Saharan region are aware of the implications and challenges connected to borders. The threats and challenges are enormous and common to all countries in the region. Many initiatives and mechanisms has been launched to address the border issues, but not many of them are successful or even operationalised.

- In fact, many activities on border security cooperation has taken place at the highest political level in the region, however, most of the initiatives has been the product of short term political wins and therefore not supported or sustained when trying to operationalise them. The initiatives that are functioning or at least operating seems all to be driven by outside actors.

- Who knows today any thing about Tripoli Action Plan (March 2012) or Rabat Declaration (November 2013) which was endorsed by 10 Countries in the Region, Mauritania, Morocco, Algeria, Tunisia, Chad, Mali, Niger, Sudan, Egypt and Libya, in March 2012.
Enormous Challenges and Threats Derives Necessity for Regional Cooperation

• Tripoli Action Plan which emerged from the First Regional Ministerial Conference on Border Security Cooperation (2012), is a well established joint and comprehensive regional strategy developed by a senior security professional experts from the 10 state members, to combat factors of instability across the regional borders, it includes all the implementation mechanisms in the short, medium and long-term to enhance cooperation and face the security challenges and the growing intrusions across the borders.

• In fact, our region does not have a shortage of initiatives, strategies or plans to enhance cooperation on border issues, our problem lies in deficiencies in the follow up process and capacity to act and implement.

• In the light of the security challenges our region is experiencing which no State is able to confront alone, a radical change is needed in regional cooperation mechanism, we needs to be more pragmatic. We need to translate our political initiatives in to a solid operational steps on the ground. It’s time that we move forward and establish a regional framework, a regional entity to enhance cooperation between our countries in order to defeat today’s cross border organized crimes and counter-terrorism, which threatens the all.
Enormous Challenges and Threats
Derives Necessity for Regional Cooperation

Threats & Challenges:

A risk assessment on the existing and emerging threats in Libya identified 38 different situations for which security is of great concern. Out of the 38 threats, 11 considered to have a direct impact on Libyan border security and management.

- Narcoterrorism.
- Radicalized returnees from combat zones and hotbeds.
- Irregular immigration & Human Trafficking.
- Smuggling of subsidized goods, fuel, medicines, etc.
- Drug trafficking and contraband.
- Cross Border Terrorism and spread of radicalised groups.
- Influence of Foreign Armed Groups.
- National Identity Fraud.
- Arms proliferation among local border communities.
- Illegal fishing.
- Sea pollution.
Challenge of immigration & Human Trafficking

• Irregular immigration consists a common challenge for both Europe and Africa. Indeed migration crisis, south-north, is a real and quite massive. The problems with all the immigrant crises are it’s just a symptom of a huge problem somewhere else, and the dilemma is that the international community still insist on tackling the symptoms rather than tackling the problem itself.

• For so long, the international community has been responding to the issue of migration through a crisis management perspective (security measures to block the migration flow & provide some humanitarian aids).

• Dealing with the migration from a crisis management perspective only, may ease the problem for a certain limit, a certain time and a certain location but it will not eradicates the phenomenon.

• Sustainable Migration partnership between south and North based on spirit of cooperation, solidarity, shared responsibility and win-win strategy, is a key factor for deriving solid and tangible solutions that are based on a common sound understanding of the drivers of migration.

• We need to re-think outside the box, we need to think beyond the crisis, we need to ‘plant the seeds’ today for a mid & long term approach on migration, the international community needs to deliver a major boost to Africa on the scale of the U.S. Marshall Plan implemented in Europe after World War II.
Border security is a pressing issue for North African-Sahel countries facing common challenges related to terrorism, illicit trafficking, and immigration. The vast space of the Sahara and the West coast of Africa has become a breeding ground and safe haven for organised criminal activity, as this region is suffering from a vast security vacuum, which has provided the armed gangs and criminals with vast potential to move in a geographical area stretching from Mauritania to Darfur region of Sudan penetrating six African countries, namely, Burkina Faso, Mali, Niger, Algeria, Chad and Libya, to the Sudan. This desert area which is exploited by these gangs is estimated to be 4 million square kilometers. The difficulty in the terrain and the desert hostile environment, the limited capacity and resources available with the lack in the mechanism of coordination and security cooperation between the regional states, all of that makes the regional States largely powerless in controlling their borders, unleashing the groups of organized crime of various forms, extremism, terrorism, smugglers and Human traffickers, to exploit the borders of those States in their movements and carrying out their operations across those borders threatening the security and stability of all states in the region.
Combating Transnational Threats
Radicalism, Returnees, Terrorism, Trafficking, and Organised Crime

• Radicalised Returnees could cause tremendous havoc to the fragile security in the countries of the region. Tunisian terrorist events are proof of how a few radicals can terrorize a country, devastate businesses, especially tourism, and call into question the government’s ability to provide “protection” to the population.

• The root causes of the radicalism from North Africa has to be addressed (the failure of governments to govern, to root out corruption, and meet basic needs of the populations, especially youth).

• Both hard and soft approaches to dealing with returnees need to be adopted, stronger anti-terrorism laws, monitoring returnees, curfews/state of emergency, forfeiture of passports, imprisonment coupled with reintegration and reeducation, community participation, psychological support, job training, state controlled education of Imams, etc.

IBM Strategy for Border Security Reform in Libya

IBM Definition:

• It’s the national and international coordination and cooperation among the relevant authorities and agencies involved in border security and trade facilitation to establish effective, efficient and integrated border management systems, in order to reach the objective of open, but well controlled and secured borders.

• In line with the definition, its clear that the key aspects of the IBM concept are hovering around cooperation, coordination and collaboration between the related stakeholders.

• Four different models of IBM structure have been discussed and assessed, the NTBSM decided, with full support from EUBAM Libya, that “model 4” is the most suitable one for reforming the Libyan border security and management. It is based on a single land, air and sea agency (for border checks and surveillance), an independent Migration Agency and an independent Customs Agency. The three agencies will work under the umbrella of an overarching coordination function.
Four different models of border security and management have been discussed and assessed:

- Model 1 Independent Agencies, adding a coordination function on top.
- Model 2 Creation of two Independent Agencies: Maritime Border Agency & land border Agency, with an overarching coordination function.
- Model 3 Merging all six administration into one single agency.
- Model 4 a single maritime and land border agency, with stand-alone Migration agency and a stand-alone customs agency, with an overarching coordination function for the three agencies.

In conclusion, and after assessing the different models, the NTBSM decided, with full support from EUBAM Libya, that “model 4” is the most suitable one for reforming the Libyan border security and management. It is based on a single land, air and sea agency (for border checks and surveillance), an independent Migration Agency and an independent Customs Agency. The three agencies will work under the umbrella of an overarching coordination function.

• The Rabat Declaration emphasized the importance of accelerating the establishment of the secretariat mentioned in the Tripoli Action Plan, and agreed that Libya will draft its structure. The secretariat structure should be presented to member states representatives in a meeting to be held in Tripoli within two months RD.

• Therefore a tentative structure for the secretariat, its mission and field of operations has been drafted and presented to the concerned states in two meetings held in the MoF where some changes on the structure has been agreed; the final SSRBSS structure is subject to the approval by the 3rd Regional Border Security Conference which will be held in Cairo later.

Enormous Challenges beyond any Country to cope alone.

Common/shared threats can only be dealt with common/shared responsibility.

Regional Governments needs to be increasingly proactive rather than reactive.

Creating a regional operational body is the solution for countering transnational organized crime and strengthening border security cooperation in the region.

Finally, I would emphasis that migration will be exist as long as its motives and causes exist, people will keep moving motivated by their hopes for better life, and it’s either the good opportunities goes to the people, or the people goes where there is a good opportunities. Development remains a key factor to fix people in their home countries, development countries in Africa need to take advantage of the opportunities they have with their natural resources, they need infrastructure investment, human resource development, access to technology at affordable prices, knowledge exchange and know how transfer, that only will make Africa more productive and contribute positively in the world economic growth.
